

EDITORIAL

Welcome to the new issue of IRJPS. We would like to begin this issue with a positive hope of beginning a new life in amid of this pandemic situation. The national integrity and helping one another with proper social distancing norms is the most important thing in this present situation. Every one of us must strive to keep a stable mental health and spread positive energy among our near and dear ones. Keeping ourselves busy with some positive work will help us to keep grounded in this situation.

We from the desk of editors welcome the latest research in the field of pharmacy to get published in our esteemed journal. Publishing your work in some good journals will definitely boost your energy for further work in future.
